十、阅读理解

A

How many people are there on Earth, or what is the world's population? It was 8 billion (十亿) in November 2022, from the United Nations Population Division (U. N. P. D. 联合国人口司). That's a super big number, isn't it? But how did they arrive at it? Did they count all of us one by one?

Well, that number is only an estimate (估算). We can't know correctly how many people are alive at any given time. To make this estimate, the U. N. P. D. must collect information from many different places. However, not all the information is correct. For example, some countries haven't done a census (人口普查) for ten years or more. And what about places where there's war? It's just impossible to count people there!

Even with imperfect information, the U. N. P. D. can still work out how the world's population changes over time. But the scientists don't just work once and call it a day. Instead, they check their estimate every five years with new information.

At www.worldometers.info/world-population, you can watch the world population clock. But the clock doesn't really tick every time someone is born or dies. Instead, it uses all the information to estimate how much the population will grow next year. Because the population is always growing, and a clock that only changes once a year would be boring. So, the clock breaks the yearly growth into smaller parts for each second. This makes it tick all the time.

B

According to the United Nations, later this year, India's population will surpass China's. With 1, 428 billion people, it will be the most populous country in the world.

What is driving India's population growth? Well, one of the biggest reasons is its young people. Nearly half of the country's population is under the age of 25. Because of this, scientists believe that India's population will reach the top in 2065. They say that India has a lot to learn from China. Giving better education is actually one of the best ways to control population.

Becoming the world's most populous country means an important turning point in India's development. Have you ever heard the term "demographic dividend (人口红利)"? It means that the more working people a country has, the more likely its economy (经济) is to grow. In 2021, the working-age population of India stood at 900 million. That was a surprising number. However, the U. S. working-age population is only 207 million.

Nearly 40 years ago, many young, clever Indians started moving to the West. They were looking for better chances for their skills. At that time, many scientists were worried about this. Many of them have become CEOs of top companies in the world. They can help develop their home country.

▲ There are, for example, not as many new non-farming jobs as people expected. Millions of young Indians feel hopeless about the future of their jobs. They choose to continue their studies rather than look for jobs. India's unemployment rate (失业率) climbed to 8. 11% this past April.

India still has a long way to go before it starts to take full advantage of its population size.

1. What can we learn from the situation of Indian population?

- A. India has stepped into an aging society recently.
- B. India became the most populous country last year.
- C. It's not necessary for India to control its population.
- D. The population of India will reach the top in 42 years.

2. Which of the following can be the best to fill in “ ▲ ” in Paragraph 4?

- A. India takes full advantage of its population size now.
- B. With those chances for growth also bring disadvantages.
- C. Young people in India should choose to continue their studies.
- D. The problem of India's unemployment rate will be solved soon.

3. Which could be the best title for the passage?

- | | |
|---------------------------------------|--|
| A. Problems of populous countries. | B. Advantages of population growth. |
| C. Will this be the “Indian Century”? | D. What makes India's population growth? |

十、阅读理解

How many people are there on Earth, or what is the world’s population? It was 8 billion (十亿) in November 2022, from the United Nations Population Division (U. N. P. D. 联合国人口司). That’s a super big number, isn’t it? But how did they arrive at it? Did they count all of us one by one?

Well, that number is only an estimate (估算). We can’t know correctly how many people are alive at any given time. To make this estimate, the U. N. P. D. must collect information from many different places. However, not all the information is correct. For example, some countries haven’t done a census (人口普查) for ten years or more. And what about places where there’s war? It’s just impossible to count people there!

Even with imperfect information, the U. N. P. D. can still work out how the world's population changes over time. But the scientists don't just work once and call it a day. Instead, they check their estimate every five years with new information.

At www.worldometers.info/world-population, you can watch the world population clock. But the clock doesn't really tick every time someone is born or dies. Instead, it uses all the information to estimate how much the population will grow next year. Because the population is always growing, and a clock that only changes once a year would be boring. So, the clock breaks the yearly growth into smaller parts for each second. This makes it tick all the time.

1. How does the writer introduce the topic?

- A. By telling a story.
- B. By using a saying.
- C. By asking questions.
- D. By giving examples.

2. What is the main idea of Paragraph 2?

- B. Ways of collecting population information.
- C. Challenges of getting a correct population number.
- D. Importance of counting people in different countries.

3. How often do scientists check their population estimate?

- A. Every day. B. Every month. C. Every five years. D. Every ten years.

4. Why does the world population clock tick all the time?

- A. To show the population is always changing.
- B. To break the monthly growth into smaller parts.
- C. To show how many people are alive right now.
- D. To correct mistakes in the population numbers.

5. In which part of a magazine can we read this passage?

According to the United Nations, later this year, India's population will surpass China's. With 1, 428 billion people, it will be the most populous country in the world.

What is driving India's population growth? Well, one of the biggest reasons is its young people. Nearly half of the country's population is under the age of 25. Because of this, scientists believe that India's population will reach the top in 2065. They say that India has a lot to learn from China. Giving better education is actually one of the best ways to control population.

Becoming the world's most populous country means an important turning point in India's development. Have you ever heard the term “demographic dividend (人口红利)”? It means that the more working people a country has, the more likely its economy (经济) is to grow. In 2021, the working-age population of India stood at 900 million. That was a surprising number. However, the U. S. working-age population is only 207 million.

Nearly 40 years ago, many young, clever Indians started moving to the West. They were looking for better chances for their skills. At that time, many scientists were worried about this. Many of them have become CEOs of top companies in the world. They can help develop their home country.

▲ There are, for example, not as many new non-farming jobs as people expected. Millions of young Indians feel hopeless about the future of their jobs. They choose to continue their studies rather than look for jobs. India's unemployment rate (失业率) climbed to 8. 11% this past April.

India still has a long way to go before it starts to take full advantage of its population size.

 - A. India has stepped into an aging society recently.
 - B. India became the most populous country last year.
 - C. It's not necessary for India to control its population.
 - D. The population of India will reach the top in 42 years.
2. Which of the following can be the best to fill in “ ▲ ” in Paragraph 4?
 - A. India takes full advantage of its population size now.
 - B. With those chances for growth also bring disadvantages.
 - C. Young people in India should choose to continue their studies.
 - D. The problem of India's unemployment rate will be solved soon.
3. Which could be the best title for the passage?
 - A. Problems of populous countries.
 - B. Advantages of population growth.
 - C. Will this be the “Indian Century”?
 - D. What makes India's population growth?

【答案】1. D 2. B 3. D

【导语】本文主要介绍了印度的人口增长，及其带来的好处与坏处。

1. 细节理解题。根据“Nearly half of the country's population is under the age of 25.”可知，该国近一半的人口年龄在 25 岁以下，因此选项 A“印度最近步入了老龄化社会”表述错误；根据“According to the United Nations, later this year, India's population will surpass China's. With 1, 428 billion people, it will be the most populous country in the world.”可知，这一句提到了今年晚些时候，印度的人口将超过中国，将成为世界上人口最多的国家。选项 B“印度去年成为人口最多的国家”描述错误；根据“Giving better education is actually one of the best ways to control population.”可知，提供更好的教育实际上是控制人口的最佳方法之一，因此选项 C“印度没有必要控制人口”表述错误。故选 D。
2. 推理判断题。根据“Many of them have become CEOs of top companies in the world. They can help develop their home country.”可知，设空处应该提到成长带来的好处同时也带来一些不利影响。故选 B。
3. 标题归纳题。通读全文，文章主要讲述了印度的人口增长以及导致人口增长的因素，及其带来的好处与坏处。所以最佳标题是选项 D“印度人口增长的原因是什么？”。故选 D。
