九、阅读理解

A

Many people complain that their memory is bad, especially as they get older. Life would be easier if we could remember things effortlessly. So how can we improve our memory?

Many people think that repeating things is the best way to remember them. This of course helps short-term memory (remembering a telephone number for a few seconds, for example), but psychologists (心理学家) doubt whether it can help you to remember things for very long. The British psychologist Ec Stanford seemed to prove this point when he tested himself on five prayers (祈祷文) that he had read aloud every morning for over 25 years. He found that he could remember no more than three words of some of them! More helpful, especially for remembering numbers, is grouping the information. The following numbers would be impossible for most of us to remember: 1492178919931848. But look at them in chunks, and it becomes much easier: 1492 1789 1993 1848.

According to experts, there are many ways of training your memory. One method, which may be useful in learning foreign languages, is to create a picture, in your mind connected to a word you want to remember. Another method is to invent a story that includes all the things you want to remember. In experiments, people were asked to remember up to 120 words using this skill; when tested afterwards, on average, they were able to recall 90% of them!

For those studying large number of information, psychologists suggest that the best way to remember the information is to ask yourself lots of questions as you go along. So, for example, if you were reading about a particular disease (疾病), you would ask yourself questions like: “Do people get it from water?”, “What parts of the body does it influence?” and so on. This is said to be far more effective than time spent “passively” reading and re-reading notes.

1. Which of the following is true about repeating things according to the passage?

- A. It helps to remember things for long. B. It makes remembering things interesting.
C. It helps short-term memory for sure. D. It makes remembering prayers effortlessly

2. The word “chunks” in Paragraph 2 probably means “_____”.

- A. groups B. turns C. details D. lines

3. How many ways of remembering things are mentioned in the passage?

- A. 6. B. 5. C. 4. D. 3.

4. What can we infer from the passage?

- A. Creating a picture is useful in learning math.
B. Inventing a prayer trains our memory quickly.
C. Remembering long numbers is easy for people.
D. Asking yourself questions helps improve your memory.

5. What's the writer's main purpose in writing this passage?

- A. To share some ways of improving memory.
B. To recognize some memory problems.
C. To explain some memory experiments.
D. To complain that his memory is bad.

九、阅读理解

Many people complain that their memory is bad, especially as they get older. Life would be easier if we could remember things effortlessly. So how can we improve our memory?

Many people think that repeating things is the best way to remember them. This of course helps short-term memory (remembering a telephone number for a few seconds, for example), but psychologists

(心理学家) doubt whether it can help you to remember things for very long. The British psychologist E. C. Stanford seemed to prove this point when he tested himself on five prayers (祈祷文) that he had read aloud every morning for over 25 years. He found that he could remember no more than three words of some of them! More helpful, especially for remembering numbers, is grouping the information. The following numbers would be impossible for most of us to remember: 1492178919931848. But look at them in chunks, and it becomes much easier: 1492 1789 1993 1848.

According to experts, there are many ways of training your memory. One method, which may be useful in learning foreign languages, is to create a picture, in your mind connected to a word you want to remember. Another method is to invent a story that includes all the things you want to remember. In experiments, people were asked to remember up to 120 words using this skill; when tested afterwards, on average, they were able to recall 90% of them!

For those studying large number of information, psychologists suggest that the best way to remember the information is to ask yourself lots of questions as you go along. So, for example, if you were reading about a particular disease (疾病), you would ask yourself questions like: “Do people get it from water?”, “What parts of the body does it influence?” and so on. This is said to be far more effective than time spent “passively” reading and re-reading notes.

1. Which of the following is true about repeating things according to the passage?

- A. It helps to remember things for long. B. It makes remembering things interesting.
C. It helps short-term memory for sure. D. It makes remembering prayers effortlessly

2. The word “chunks” in Paragraph 2 probably means “_____”.

- A. groups B. turns C. details D. lines

3. How many ways of remembering things are mentioned in the passage?

- A. 6. B. 5. C. 4. D. 3.

4. What can we infer from the passage?

- A. Creating a picture is useful in learning math.
B. Inventing a prayer trains our memory quickly.
C. Remembering long numbers is easy for people.
D. Asking yourself questions helps improve your memory.

5. What's the writer's main purpose in writing this passage?

- A. To share some ways of improving memory.
B. To recognize some memory problems.
C. To explain some memory experiments.

D. To complain that his memory is bad.

【答案】1. C 2. A 3. C 4. D 5. A

3. 细节理解题。根据文中“Many people think that repeating things is the best way to remember them. One method, which may be useful in learning foreign languages, is to create a picture, in your mind connected to a word you want to remember. Another method is to invent a story that includes all the things you want to remember. For those studying large number of information, psychologists suggest that the best way to remember the information is to ask yourself-lots of questions as you go along.”可知，文章提到了重复事情、在你的脑海里画一幅图画，把它和你想记住的单词联系起来、编造一个故事，包括你想记住的所有事情和边走边问自己很多问题共四种方法。故选 C。
4. 推理判断题。根据文中“For those studying large number of information, psychologists suggest that the best way to remember the information is to ask yourself lots of questions as you go along.”可推理出，问自己问题有助于提高记忆力。故选 D。
