The Best Language for Learning Math

What is the best language for learning math? Hint: You are not reading it

Chinese, Japanese and Korean all have simpler number words. They express math concepts (概念) more clearly than English. The language gap has drawn lots of attention. Several recent studies have linked weaker math abilities in English-speaking children to English number words.

Chinese, for example, has just ten basic number words. English, however, has more than two dozen. The trouble starts at “11”. English has a word (“eleven”) for that number. Chinese, Japanese and Korean have words that can be translated as “ten-one”—spoken with the “ten” first. That makes it easier for children to understand the place value. Student can easily see the number system is based on units of 10.

English number words over 10 don't make the place value clear. Words for numbers 13 to 19 change the order of the ones and tens. Children are more likely to confuse (困惑) 17 with 71. Therefore, children working with English number words have a harder time doing complex (复杂的) calculations. They make more mistakes.

It also feels more natural for Chinese speakers than for English speakers to use the “make-a-ten” method. When adding two number, Chinese students often break down the numbers into parts and regroup them into tens and ones. For example, 9 plus 5 becomes 9 plus 1 plus 4. This method greatly helps students work out math problems. Many teachers in America are teaching their students the “make-a-ten” method. However, they are having a hard time because of the confusing English number words.

Now, you should feel lucky that you are learning math in China. Thanks to your mother language, all the math problems have become less difficult and less confusing.

31. According to the article, several recent studies have found a relationship between English number words and _____.

- A. Weaker math abilities in young learners of English
- B. Weaker math abilities in English-speaking children
- C. Stronger math abilities in young learners of English
- D. Stronger math abilities in English-speaking children

32. According to the article, how many basic number words are there in English?

- A. Ten. B. Eleven. C. More than a dozen. D. More than two dozen.

33. The first three paragraphs mainly talk about _____.

- A. why Asian languages can make math learning easier.

- B. why Asian are better at math than English speakers.
- C. how Asian children do basic calculations within ten.
- D. how children's math abilities are judged in different. countries.

34. According to the article, if you use the “make-a-ten” method to work out math problems, 8 plus 7 will become _____.

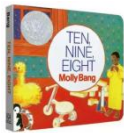

- A. $6 + 2 + 7$ B. $7 + 1 + 7$ C. $8 + 1 + 6$ D. $8 + 2 + 5$

35. The underlined expression “Thanks to” in the last paragraph can be replaced by “_____.”

- A. Instead of B. Because of C. According to D. In addition to

Ten

Human children need around 10 hours of sleep a night (you'd need two hours if you were a giraffe and twenty-two hours if you were a koala). 10 percent of the world is left-handed. The world's largest omelette (煎蛋) was 10 metres wide. 10 percent of people in the world live on islands.

The Best Language for Learning Math

What is the best language for learning math? Hint: You are not reading it

Chinese, Japanese and Korean all have simpler number words. They express math concepts (概念) more clearly than English. The language gap has drawn lots of attention. Several recent studies have linked weaker math abilities in English-speaking children to English number words.

Chinese, for example, has just ten basic number words. English, however, has more than two dozen. The trouble starts at “11”. English has a word (“eleven”) for that number. Chinese, Japanese and Korean have words that can be translated as “ten-one”—spoken with the “ten” first. That makes it easier for children to understand the place value. Student can easily see the number system is based on units of 10.

English number words over 10 don’t make the place value clear. Words for numbers 13 to 19 change the order of the ones and tens. Children are more likely to confuse (困惑) 17 with 71. Therefore, children working with English number words have a harder time doing complex (复杂的) calculations. They make more mistakes.

It also feels more natural for Chinese speakers than for English speakers to use the “make-a-ten” method. When adding two number, Chinese students often break down the numbers into parts and regroup them into tens and ones. For example, 9 plus 5 becomes 9 plus 1 plus 4. This method greatly helps students work out math problems. Many teachers in America are teaching their students the “make-a-ten” method. However, they are having a hard time because of the confusing English number words.

Now, you should feel lucky that you are learning math in China. Thanks to your mother language, all the math problems have become less difficult and less confusing.

31. According to the article, several recent studies have found a relationship between English number words and _____.

- A. Weaker math abilities in young learners of English
- B. Weaker math abilities in English-speaking children
- C. Stronger math abilities in young learners of English
- D. Stronger math abilities in English-speaking children

32. According to the article, how many basic number words are there in English?

- A. Ten.
- B. Eleven.
- C. More than a dozen.
- D. More than two dozen.

33. The first three paragraphs mainly talk about _____.

- A. why Asian languages can make math learning easier.
- B. why Asian are better at math than English speakers.
- C. how Asian children do basic calculations within ten.
- D. how children's math abilities are judged in different. countries.

34. According to the article, if you use the “make-a-ten” method to work out math problems, 8 plus 7 will become _____.

- A. $6 + 2 + 7$
- B. $7 + 1 + 7$
- C. $8 + 1 + 6$
- D. $8 + 2 + 5$

35. The underlined expression “Thanks to” in the last paragraph can be replaced by “_____.”

- A. Instead of
- B. Because of
- C. According to
- D. In addition to

【答案】36. B 37. D 38. A 39. D 40. B

They express math concepts (概念) more clearly than English.”和“Chinese, Japanese and Korean have words that can be translated as ‘ten-one’—spoken with the ‘ten’ first. That makes it easier for children to understand the place value.”可知，前三段介绍了为什么亚洲语言可以使数学学习更容易。故选 A。

34. 推理判断题。根据“For example, 9 plus 5 becomes 9 plus 1 plus 4.”可知，根据“造十”的方法，例如 $9 + 5$ 变成 $9 + 1 + 4$ 。因此 $8 + 7$ ，应先把 8 凑成 10，变成 $8 + 2 + 5$ ，故选 D。

35. 词义猜测题。根据“Now, you should feel lucky that you are learning math in China. Thanks to your mother language, all the math problems have become less difficult and less confusing.”可知，现在，你应该感到幸运，你是在中国学习数学，原因是你的母语，所有的数学问题都变得不那么困难和困惑了，因此 thanks to 表示原因，可以用 because of 替换。故选 B。
