As a country powerful in math, China has many folk games which are full of math wisdom (智慧). You may play many of them before. Let's take a look at three of them.

Chinese nine linked rings puzzle It's believed that the nine linked rings puzzle was created in the Western Han Dynasty. And it is usually made up of nine rings connected to a handle (手柄). Players have to remove (移除) all the rings from the handle to win the game. This is not a simple game. The solution takes 341 moves, so lots of patience is required. But if you learn to solve it, it's hard to forget.
Tangram First popular in the Ming and Qing dynasties, the tangram is a puzzle made up of seven pieces of different shapes. For each puzzle, players need to use all the pieces to make a shape. To do it, they have to know about geometry (几何学). In the 18th century, the tangram was brought to the West and soon became popular there.
Luban lock The Luban lock was first created by Lu Ban 2,000 years ago. The lock has a lot to do with solid geometry (立体几何). It's hard to separate the six pieces. However, it is usually easier to unlock a Luban lock than to put it back together. Now, there are Luban locks made up of nine or more pieces.

Confucius teaches us wisdom to deal with confusion, anxiety and fear.

Confusion, worry, fear... Having such bad feelings is not strange to us. But how can we get through these challenges? We can find Confucius' wisdom in The Analects of Confucius.

子曰：“知者不惑，仁者不忧，勇者不惧。”——《论语》

Confucius said: “The wise are free from doubts, the benevolent from anxiety, and the brave from fear.”—The Analects of Confucius

What does it mean?

Wei Shengkun is a Chinese teacher from the Affiliated High School of Peking University in Beijing. He shares that being wise, kind and brave seems simple and easily understood. However, what makes a person truly wise is questioned.

Zhu Xi, a great thinker in the Southern Song Dynasty (1127-1279), believed that a truly wise person understands the main rules of the world. This shows the importance of learning and thinking, because only through these can we truly become wise. Zhu also pointed out that the most important thing in life is to be kind to others and have a heart full of kindness. Such a person won't worry because their kindness helps people around them and helps themselves as well. This person will also have the courage to face the unknown, so they won't fear anything.

In all, to overcome (克服) bad feelings, we need to start learning as soon as possible and look for the world's greatest truths.

Telling Chinese stories to the world is a responsibility for those of us who can speak English. If you want to tell the world a "Chinese story", what would you choose to talk about? Students at a speaking competition offered their own answers. 41 This topic showed strong confidence in our own country.

42 Some of them talked about Chinese traditional stories, such as Confucius' travels. Others preferred more modern stories, such as the Belt and Road (一带一路). But most contestants chose to share personal stories. 43

44 Mid-Autumn Festival falls on the 15th day of the eighth month in Chinese lunar calendar. But in Ningbo, it is on the 16th day. One student told a story to explain this. During the Song Dynasty, a person named Shi Hao would go to Ningbo and celebrate the festival with his mother every year. 45 To his surprise, everyone there was waiting for him to celebrate. The story shows the importance of family reunions (团聚) in Chinese culture.

We believe telling stories is a good way to help foreigners understand China better.

- A. But one year, he was late and returned on the 16th day of the eighth lunar month.
- B. For example, one contestant talked about how his mother worked hard to raise him.
- C. The contestants (参赛者) chose different types of stories.
- D. Chinese culture is also a good choice to share.
- E. The topic of the competition was A Chinese Story I Want to Tell the World.
