下面的材料 A-F 是摘自某百科全书关于礼仪的描述。请根据五个人的交换生经历，选择他们需要了解的内容，并在答题卡上将相应的字母编号涂黑。

_____ 1 _____ Peter was studying in China and he saw the parents of his host family teach their daughter not to hit the bowl with her chopsticks at table.

_____ 2 _____ Frank, from France, kissed his Chinese friend on his face when they first met at school, but his friend seemed embarrassed (尴尬的).

_____ 3 _____ Li Hua, from China, gave his seat to an old man on the bus in London, but the man looked a bit angry.

_____ 4 _____ Helen is studying in South Korea as an exchange student. She finds people there really like to bow.

_____ 5 _____ Lisa, from America, always puts her favorite dish in front of herself while her Chinese friends feel uncomfortable.

A	B	C
D	E	F
In China, it's impolite for people to put a dish they love directly in front of themselves at table. It's said that all the dishes should be shared by everyone at table.	In America, it's OK to be a little late for a party, but you're not supposed to be late in Switzerland because being on time is very important to the people in the country.	In China, people are encouraged to offer their seats to the old. But in the west, if you do that, the old people will get angry. They will think that you are hurting their feelings.

下面的材料 A-F 是摘自某百科全书关于礼仪的描述。请根据五个人的交换生经历，选择他们需要了解的内容，并在答题卡上将相应的字母编号涂黑。

_____ 1 _____ Peter was studying in China and he saw the parents of his host family teach their daughter not to hit the bowl with her chopsticks at table.

_____ 2 _____ Frank, from France, kissed his Chinese friend on his face when they first met at school, but his friend seemed embarrassed (尴尬的).

_____ 3 _____ Li Hua, from China, gave his seat to an old man on the bus in London, but the man looked a bit angry.

_____ 4 _____ Helen is studying in South Korea as an exchange student. She finds people there really like to bow.

5 Lisa, from America, always puts her favorite dish in front of herself while her Chinese friends feel uncomfortable.

A	B	C
D	E	F
In China, it's impolite for people to put a dish they love directly in front of themselves at table. It's said that all the dishes should be shared by everyone at table.	In America, it's OK to be a little late for a party, but you're not supposed to be late in Switzerland because being on time is very important to the people in the country.	In China, people are encouraged to offer their seats to the old. But in the west, if you do that, the old people will get angry. They will think that you are hurting their feelings.

【答案】1. B 2. A 3. F 4. C 5. D

【解析】本文介绍了不同国家的一些不同的习俗以及五个交换生的经历。

1. 根据“Peter was studying in China and he saw the parents of his host family teach their daughter not to hit the bowl with her chopsticks at table.”可知中国人不让孩子用筷子敲碗，选项 B“在中国，用筷子敲空碗是不礼貌的。中国人认为只有乞丐向其他人乞求食物的时候才会敲碗。”与之对应。故选 B。

2. 根据“Frank, from France, kissed his Chinese friend on his face when they first met at school, but his friend seemed embarrassed (尴尬的).”可知弗兰克亲吻了他的中国朋友得脸颊，但是他的朋友感到尴尬。选项 A“在法国，人们在见面时通常亲吻彼此。这是他们打招呼的方式。但是和中国打招呼的方式不同。中国人在第一次见面时握手。”与之对应。故选 A。

3. 根据“Li Hua, from China, gave his seat to an old man on the bus in London, but the man looked a bit angry.”可知李华在伦敦的公交车上给一个老人让座，但是老人却生气了。选项 F“在中国，人们被鼓励主动让座给老人。但是在西方，如果你这样做，老人将会生气。他们将会认为你伤害了他们的感情。”与之对应。故选 F。

4. 根据“Helen is studying in South Korea as an exchange student. She finds people there really like to bow.”可知海伦发现韩国人喜欢鞠躬。选项 C“在韩国，鞠躬是传统的问候。在那个国家鞠躬是日常生活的一部分。韩国人通常把鞠躬作为一种尊敬的信号，尤其在他们第一次遇见的人们之间。”与之对应。故选 C。

5. 根据“Lisa, from America, always puts her favorite dish in front of herself while her Chinese friends feel uncomfortable.”可知丽萨总是把她最喜欢的食物放到自己面前然而她的中国朋友却感到不舒服。选项 D“在中国，对人们来说在餐桌上把他们自己喜欢的菜直接放到自己面前是不礼貌的。据说在餐桌上所有的菜应该被所有人分享。”与之对应。故选 D。
