It is said that a new culture can always keep your eyes and your mind open. Now I am studying in Russia as 1 exchange student. I learn about it from my own experience.

One of 2 differences is about people's way of life. One day, a Russian friend invited me to a well-known restaurant in Moscow. I 3 to try local food. After arriving there, I found nothing on the table but some small plates. To my greater surprise, on the plates there 4 only a few slices of tomatoes, nuts, and several piece of onions. 5 the dishes were simple, we drank a lot and I felt the passion (热情) from the bottom of his heart. In China, when we invite our friends or relatives, we always provide 6 with a big dinner with all kinds of dishes. We like to prepare 7 we can to show our friendliness.

8 Russian custom also surprises me greatly. As we know, it is 9 cold in winter there that it takes a lot of courage to just go outside. However, when winter comes, Russians enjoy 10. They even take their kids outside to swim. Like their parents, Russian kids rub (揉擦) their bodies 11 snow before jumping into the water. The water is freezing cold, but they all play 12 in it! Sometimes they invite us to join them, however, we have to say no, because it is really difficult for us 13 it just like them!

I 14 a lot from the exchange visit and it's been educational in many ways. 15 interesting the visit is!

三、阅读理解 (本大题共 15 小题, 每小题 2 分, 满分 30 分)

A

When 14-year-old Lin Xia from Shanghai first arrived in London for a student exchange program, she was both excited and nervous. Her host family, the Thompsons, welcomed her warmly, but cultural misunderstandings soon appeared.

On her first morning, Mrs. Thompson served baked beans and toast for breakfast. Xia politely ate a few bites, though the salty beans couldn't satisfy her taste buds. Later, she whispered to her roommate Emma, "Do British people eat beans every morning?" Emma burst out laughing. "No! Mum thought you might miss Chinese breakfasts. She read online that beans are popular in Shanghai!" Xia realized Mrs. Thompson had mixed up Shanghai's sweet red bean desserts with British baked beans.

Another challenge turned up during a school project. Xia's team needed to design a poster about climate solutions. While her British teammates freely debated (辩论) ideas, Xia hesitated (犹豫) to disagree with others, remembering her teachers' advice in China: "Group harmony matters most." Noticing her silence, the teacher Ms. Wilkins came up to her. "Your opinion is valuable, Xia. In Britain, respectful debates often lead to better solutions." Taking a deep breath, Xia shared her idea of using algae (藻类) to take in carbon dioxide — a concept she'd learned from her scientist father. The team loved it and won the first prize.

By the trip's end, Xia had grown bolder. She even taught the Thompsons to make dumplings, laughing as Mr. Thompson accidentally dropped one on the cat. "Cultural exchange isn't about being perfect," she wrote in her diary. "It's about listening, adapting (适应), and finding joy in the messy middle."

Travelling around the world can be exciting, but it can also be challenging and lead to culture shock and feelings of stress.

When I moved to Tuscany, Italy, right after college, I fell in love with the scenery. Who wouldn't be? The rolling hills, beautiful buildings and delicious food made the long flight worth every minute. I was excited about my new beginning. But then, I started to notice little things.

As an American, we are used to a bit of personal space. Where I'm from, knocking into someone or standing very closely is considered quite impolite. This is different from the truth in Italy.

Because there were no translation apps at that time, not knowing the language was also challenging. Sometimes, I would feel helpless. However, Italians like to speak with their hands—a habit I've carried over till this day. Gestures can express general ideas and feelings.

Of course, just because you've experienced culture shock in one country doesn't mean you won't do so in another.

Years later, when I moved to China, my experience was special. The culture there was something very foreign to me — down to how to buy things. Before moving there, I had never heard of WeChat or Alipay. I wasn't prepared at all for how important these things would be. Experiencing small waves of culture shock reminds me that I am travelling around the world and that I should appreciate what I'm taking in.

American-British writer Bill Bryson said that "...the greatest reward of travel is...to be in a position in which almost nothing is so familiar that it is taken for granted (被认为是理所当然的)."

31. What is the culture shock to the writer in Italy?

A. Italians are hard to get on with.

B. Italians stand quite closely to each other.

C. Italian scenery is not as beautiful as imagined.

D. Italians are against learning foreign languages.

32. _____ helped the writer understand what Italians were saying.

A. Translation apps B. Hand gestures C. Expressions D. Pictures

33. When arriving in China, the writer _____.

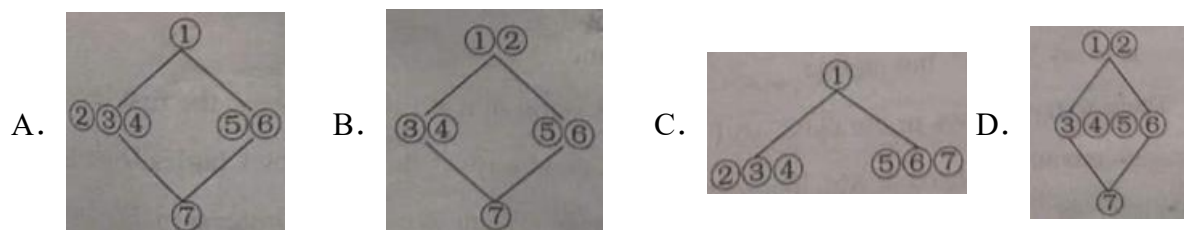

A. began to buy many things online B. learned to speak Chinese
C. experienced culture shock again D. used WeChat and Alipay well

34. What does the last paragraph mainly tell us?

A. How to deal with different cultures. B. The trouble of travelling around the world.
C. How to search for a best place to visit. D. The value of experiencing culture shock.

35. Which is the right structure of the passage?

In the eyes of many foreigners, Chinese are the best hosts (主人) and the worst guests in the world. They're not really bad guests, but because the guest host relationship in China is much different than in some western countries, it appears they are not nice guests. An western guests sometimes look rude (粗鲁的) in the eyes of Chinese guests.

In China, guests are almost like gods. Whenever I enter Chinese person's home, there is always fruit on the table for me, and someone is quick to bring me a cup of tea or water. In the west, generally the guest is not a god. Acting according to the host's way of doing things is usual behavior for a guest.

My wife's mother, a very kind elderly Chinese lady, doesn't smoke. When I see some of her guests smoking in her house, as non-smoker, I feel unhappy. Usually I want to stop them directly, but I must realize that in China, to be a good host, she must not do that. In most North America homes, if you are a guest, and the hosts are not smokers, you should not smoke in their house. At the very least, you could ask, "Is it OK if I smoke?" But, don't be surprised if they say, "No, you can't smoke." In our culture, if you smoke in their home, you are a bad guest, but if they don't allow you to smoke in their house, they are not a rude host.

Guests in China also have special habits. Some western people may not adapt to these habits very soon. Thankfully my wife is Chinese, so whenever we visit a Chinese family she tells me to buy them a gift. However, giving a gift to a host is not always necessary in my country. So, if you invite international guests to your home, don't be too surprised if they don't bring you a gift. In China, you probably won't need to change the guest host relationship very much because you will probably only be the host, and Chinese are naturally very good hosts. If western hosts invite you to their house, try not to be too surprised if their style of treating you is not what you have expected.

36. Many foreigners think that Chinese hosts are the _____ in the world.

- A. best B. worst C. most natural D. most difficult

37. If the writer's guests want to smoke in his house, what will he probably say?

- A. It's OK if you smoke here. B. Let's smoke together.
C. Sorry, you can't smoke here. D. Smoking is a bad habit.

38. What is the meaning of the underlined phrase "adapt to" in the passage?

- A. think back to B. get used to C. look forward to D. keep close to

39. Which of the following sentences is TRUE according to the passage?

- A. You feel surprised if your international guests don't bring you a gift to your home.
B. The writer often smokes in his mother's house.
C. You are a bad guest if the north Americans allow you to smoke in their house.
D. Guest are almost like gods in China.

40. What is the main idea of this passage?

- A. Foreigners should learn from Chinese. B. Hosts must do things in the guest's way.
C. Western hosts are always nice to guests. D. People should understand cultural differences.
